Gentlemen:

If it ever happens that you receive duplicates of ancient Roman coins which you would like to pass on to some University for educational purposes,
we should be very glad to have opportunity to purchase them.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

In response to your letter of May 2nd,
I should be very glad if you could give me a little more definite idea of what you would like in the way of Roman coins for educational purposes.

Have you a collection already?

Can you tell me something of its scope?

Have you any Greek coins?

We should like to help you, if possible.

Very truly yours,

Secretary

Mr. Sydney F. Noe,
American Numismatic Society,
Broadway between 155th and 156th Streets,
New York City, New York.

Dear Sir:

In regard to your letter of May 6. We have about fifty silver coins and perhaps sixty or seventy bronze coins of Rome. These are scattered fairly well over both the Republic and the Empire. We should like to add to these about as many more. We are fairly well equipped with books on coins. We have Eabylon and Cohen; and the catalogs of the Roman coins in the British Museum so far as published. For purposes of instruction some coins are far more valuable than others. If you see any opportunity at any time to help us get more of the important coins we shall be very glad for the favor.

It is not our intention to put in a course in coins but to give a little work in coins in connection with a course which we give in Latin Inscriptions. We wish also to improve our collection for the value it will have in illustrating the work in the Latin authors and in Roman History.

We have no Greek coins and I think we shall want to improve our collection of Roman coins before making more than an incidental start on the Greek side.

Very truly yours,

J. E. Stout

Dear Sir:

Responding to yours of May 13th, we shall be glad to cooperate should an opportunity present itself, as might be the case at any time.

If you are in New York at the near future,
I shall be very glad to have you come to our Museum
so that we can discuss the matter further.

Very truly yours,

Secretary

Dear Sir:

I am very pleased to learn that you may be able to assist us in getting material for our work in Roman coins. I think it is likely that I shall attend the meeting of the American Philological Association at Cornell University during the next Christmas holidays. If I do so and if your Museum is open at that time I should like to avail myself of your invitation to spend some time in your collection.

Sincerely yours,

S. E. Stout
